SLGA signs Health and Safety Charter

SLGA has taken another step in its commitment to become a leader in protecting the health and safety of its employees.

Earlier this month, SLGA President Barry Lacey joined more than 100 individuals from various companies and crown corporations in signing the Saskatchewan Health and Safety Leadership Charter.

The charter is an injury and prevention and healthy workplace initiative from WorkSafe Saskatchewan and Safe Saskatchewan.

Participating in the charter is a commitment from business leaders that nothing is more important than the health, safety and well-being of employees and customers. Business leaders who sign the charter also commit their support to make health and safety an important part of their business strategies.

“The Health and Safety Charter is a timely initiative for SLGA having just launched a new comprehensive Health and Safety Management System. SLGA is working hard to protect our employees and take on a leadership role in the area of health and safety,” said Lacey.
